CASTLE COMBE, WILTSHIRE

• Starting from the car park at the Newborough Warren Nature Reserve, a woodland habitat for sand-based species and red squirrels, this walk takes forest tracks and a path across the beach to reach the island of Llanddwyn, a tidal island named after St Dwynwen. • After passing the conical white lighthouse built in 1873, set amid lava rock outcrops, the walk heads back down the island and along Mallaeth Sands, with sight of many seabirds, before returning through the woods to the start.

DOCKEY WOOD, HERTFORDSHIRE

• Built by the Romans under Emperor Hadrian in AD 122, Hadrian's Wall follows the undulating natural landscape for 73 miles (117km). Starting from the car park at Steel Rigg, this walk along a section of the famous Pennine Way climbs sharply up onto the crags from where there are superb views. • It eventually descends to leave the Wall and reach the edge of Wark Forest. • After easy walking along farm tracks with views towards Hadrian's Wall across Greenlee Lough, it returns to the start.

WHEAL COATES, CORNWALL

• This walk starts from Kettlewell, a 13th century market town and a lead mining centre in the 18th to 19th centuries. Its three ancient inns were former stagecoach stops. • It follows the Dales Way along the River Wharfe and climbs gradually on an old pack-horse route, then ascends steeply to the summit of Great Whernside (704m). • With its gritstone cap over a limestone base, it is one of the finest and highest peaks of the Yorkshire Dales. • The walk descends via footpaths to Kettlewell.

KETTLEWELL, YORKSHIRE DALES

• Stob Dearg (the 'Red Peak') is one of the summits of Buachaille Etive Mòr (1,021m), the iconic, rugged pyramid-shaped mountain at the entrance to Glen Coe. Starting from Altnafeadh on the A82, it involves a challenging climb through the defences of the NE face, Curved Ridge, classed as an easy rock climb or a hard scramble, but only for experienced rock climbers. • The descent route is much easier and is a popular and well-used alternative for walkers going up Buachaille Etive Mòr.

SEVEN SISTERS, EAST SUSSEX

- This walk follows the South West Coast Path and inland paths and lanes across undulating open farmland. It takes in a section of the spectacular Jurassic Coast, climbing to the top of Golden Cap, the iconic 191m hill whose name derives from the distinctive golden greensand rock at the top.
- The base of the cliff is covered with big boulders and is popular with fossil collectors. • The start and finish are the NT Stonebarrow Hill car park with the village of Seatown as the halfway point.

GOLDEN CAP, DORSET

• Mam Tor is called the 'Shivering Mountain' as its horizontal layers of shale and gritstone are constantly being eroded, causing landslips. • This walk climbs from Castleton village, past Peak, Speedwell and Treak Cliff Caverns to the base of Mam Tor and the Blue John Mine. • A steep path leads to the summit of Mam Tor, with fine views of the Castleton and Edale valley and the Kinder plateau. • The path follows the 3km ridge to Lose Hill, descending to the valley below and back to Castleton.

MAM TOR, DERBYSHIRE

• This walk starts in the picturesque village of Castle Combe, viewed here on a snowy day. • The village of mellow stone houses lies in a deep hollow leading down to the river. • The walk crosses a golf course, then follows paths and lanes to the large Lugbury Long Barrow. • After passing through the hamlets of Nettleton and West Kington with its church, it returns over fields to an old stone footbridge. • A track through woodland and a road lead to the wood above Castle Combe and the finish.
